

pound of owned daily TP treatment capacity 3.6 times higher than Woodmoor's. See Table 1 on page 6.

Monument's position, as stated at numerous previous JUC meetings, is that each district should pay the same percentage of the cost of this expansion for creating new in uent TP constituent treatment capacity as the amount of currently owned treatment capacity for treating hydraulic flows and removing biosolid wastes in accordance with the Tri-Lakes Facility's Joint Use of Facilities Agreement (JUA) rules for treatment constituent expansions: Woodmoor-64.28 percent, Monument-19.79 percent, and Palmer Lake-15.93 percent.

Monument also states that each district should own this same percentage of the new 264 ppd of chemical total phosphorus treatment capacity that is being created with new equipment in accordance with the Tri-Lakes JUA rules for treatment constituent expansions and that district reimbursements from the $1 million state nutrient design and construction grant should also be divided by these same percentages. Table 2 on page 6 summarizes these amounts.

Palmer Lake had previously agreed to pay a third of the TP expansion construction costs.

Construction management contract referred to attorneys

The board unanimously approved a motion to authorize board Chairman Ed DeLaney to sign the $252,000 Tetra Tech construction management contract after it had been approved by the district's lawsuit attorney, Steve Mulliken.

LPSD #38
Not Participating in Healthy Kids Survey

The Healthy Kids Colorado Survey (HKCS) collects health information biennially, every odd year, from Colorado public school students. LPSD has been notified by the Colorado Department of Education that mandatory participation in this survey is no longer required; therefore, LPSD will not participate in this survey planned for the fall of 2015. This survey has raised a great deal of concern across the State and recently prompted the State Board of Education to consider requiring parental consent to participate in the survey. In the past, the Healthy Kids Colorado Survey required an "opt-in" approach which meant that parents must notify the school that they do not want their child to participate. Regardless, Lewis-Palmer School District will not participate in the Healthy Kids Colorado Survey.

TLWC Gives in a Special Way

Due to the generous grant funding of the Tri-Lakes Women's Club, Lewis-Palmer School District students with disabilities have additional supports and specialized programs available to them. Students with special needs receive the opportunity to gain needed skills through water activities such as stretching exercises, water safety, or swimming laps. "The social aspect is just as important to our students as the activity itself, especially with our students with Autism Spectrum Disorders," explains Dena Sikole, Adapted P.E. teacher. Stacey Biggs' son Tyler, LPES 3rd grader with severe epilepsy, has participated in the LPSD adapted PE program since kindergarten. Stacey states, "It is amazing to see [the] many benefits the students receive from these lessons. The growth and strength they receive from doing it is amazing. My son used to not be able to swim at all; he is now diving under the water and kicking."

District Students
Advance to State
History Day Competition

Students from both high schools, the middle school, and Monument Academy participated in and placed in the Regional History Day Competition at Colorado College on April 10 and 11. First, second, and third place winners from all categories will compete in the state competition on May 2 in Denver. Congratulations and good luck to these students:
