

participating online, neither had voting rights for these ordinances. The three properties include 3 Second St., 251 Front St., and a 0.89-acre property east of Interstate 25 and west of Jackson Creek Parkway.

Planning Director Megan Herrington explained, "it is not optimal to leave enclaves," so her staff found these for annexation.

2020 audit is ready to submit to the state

Town auditor Wade Fisher of Hinkle and Co. said the town's major funds present fairly in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. The board voted 6-0-1 to direct Foreman to file the audit with the state. Clark abstained, but when Wilson asked why, she said, "I'm afraid I can't state the grounds."

Public comments

During public comments, Jeremy Harrigan read a prepared statement accusing the board of "deliberately making ordinances that supersede our constitution." He and five others, all attending in person, stepped forward to read the exact same statement while the board members sat quietly at the dais. All demanded the board vote to become a sanctuary city against the COVID-19 pandemic.

Resident Ryan LeVier said he is "curious about the intent of these people" and their radical agenda. Then, he cautioned the trustees against following their requests.

Wilson asked those who spoke which ordinances the board passed to take away anyone's individual rights as they suggested, although he didn't reference specific ordinances. Clark said the board didn't deliberately violate individual rights and understood "what the people are trying to say."

LaKind said this barrage of requests for a sanctuary city against any future pandemic rulings "getting to the point of harassment." Planning Director Meggan Herrigan has attended numerous meetings of late to make the same request. "Bring your lawsuit because you have nothing against this board, how dare you accuse us of violating your rights," he said.

The meeting adjourned at 8:36 p.m.
