Walhof said that learning partnerships in the 2016-17 school year will include seeking stakeholder feedback on the use of technology by surveying students, parents, staff and the community, and asking business owners in the community about the skills required for future employment.

Walhof also said that Wangeman and she will attend Colorado Department of Education (CDE) meetings regarding the new legislation involving student privacy.

Consent agenda discussion

Sampayo gave a presentation regarding the procedures recommended by the CDE and used in other districts regarding approval by the board of a consent agenda each month.

She defined the consent agenda as a bundling of non-controversial items to be approved without discussion by the board. She suggested that the consent agenda should include specific information where possible.

Sampayo said that she is concerned that the board is now offering a list of items with no detail for constituents to comment upon. She suggested offering attachments for the review of the public—if not in the detail reviewed by the board, at least in sufficient detail so that the public may understand the possible impact of the items approved.

She said that, since the information is gathered for the board, this change should not involve a great deal of staff time, and other districts in the state offer summaries and historic background to the public. She said that the board packet should be available online 24 hours before the meeting. District 20 posts agenda items a week in advance of the meeting. Abbreviations and jargon should be explained clearly.

Sampayo suggested that the use of transparency in explaining the consent agenda would hold the board responsible for its actions and make the public more likely to trust the board and support financial initiatives in the future. An example would be an explanation of individual student fees and the consequences to parents if the fees are not paid.

Sampayo requested that this issue be placed on the agenda for the next board work session.

Pfaff said that the board is not trying to hide infor-
